For those of you that have already been reregistered, you might get an refund email. Don't worry if you receive the refund email, you are still registered for the class but please forward the email to me. There was a mishap on my part in regards to paying for the class when it is free to members of the Police Department.

With that being said, since the class is free if anyone else would like to attend the webinar then please send me an email so I can register you.

Thanks and be careful

Register today for the League's Responding to Resistance: De- escalation and Decision-making for Law Enforcement* Webinar

September 30th at 10:00 am.

The Responding to Resistance training is one of our most popular training dedicated solely to law enforcement agecnies. It helps frontline field officers mitigate the risks associated with police-citizen interactions that involve non-compliance.

This two-hour course is also designed for police chiefs and command/training level officers who are able to address policy development and implementation.

This webinar is free for members of the League's Property & Casualty Trust.

Participants in this webinar will learn:

- The four elements of reasonable force and the relevant case law.
- The branched force decision-making process and how to apply it in a variety of scenarios.
- The five-step detail/clarity loop that can be used to document use of force cases.
- The research, design, and practical use of the tools introduced in this class.

Please note: The webinar represents the first part of a two-part course. Responding to Resistance, Part 2 is onsite training providing practical exercises and feedback on the information provided in this course.

If you would like to foward this invitation, please click here to share this event with a friend or coworker.
