Mr. Trogdon, Mr. Clarke, Mr. Perkins, Mr. Howard, Mr. Bender, and Mayor Manheimer,

My name is Kim Roney, and I'm a piano teacher in Asheville who serves on the Multi-Modal Transportation Commission representing transit interests through my seat on the Transportation Committee.Â

I am forwarding an email I sent to Mr. Bender in advance of last week's community workshop at the NC Arboretum. I am very concerned that this community event regarding transit planning was scheduled at a location that was not accessible by bus. Because of the lack of sidewalks and bike lanes, there is not a reasonable, safe way to get to the NC Arboretum without a car. I was eager to provide input during this important feedback opportunity, so I arranged to borrow a car for the day after researching my options online. (You will see the screenshot attached.)Â

It is my understanding that this is not the first time meetings regarding transit have been held in inaccessible locations or at difficult times for public attendance. A community member shared with me that the first round of STIP/SPOT meetings held at AB Tech Enka campus were at a time when the bus transit didn't run, a location that is also not easily accessible for those on foot or using a bike. This is a tremendous missed opportunity to engage the public, especially since that meeting was meant to provide visuals of projects that represent all modes of transportation.Â

I appreciated that theÂ meeting at the NC Arboretum was held during a time when folks could take a lunch break to attend, and at a time when parents with school-aged children have an option to attend as well! When planning future meetings regarding transportation in WNC, I plead with you to consider working with Asheville or Buncombe County to utilize a space that is accessible via bus transit. The Pack Library may be a good option too, so long as the meeting is held when buses are running before and after the meeting.

Thank you for your consideration. I look forward to your response.
Kim

David,

My name is Kim Roney, and I currently sit on the Transit Committee and Multi-Modal Transportation Commission for the City of Asheville.Â

I am planning to attend the community workshop on May 11th at the NC Arboretum, though as a transit rider without a car, it is proving to be a challenge to attend. I have attached a screenshot of the message I received from Google maps when searching for a transit route, and though it would take 15 minutes to get there with a car, it would take 2 hrs and 47 minutes to walk from West Asheville.Â

In the future, I would like to see meetings like this Downtown or at least available by transit.

Thank you for your consideration,
Kim
