Subject: A Slow Walk Around Memorial Stadium

Hi Annetta:

The other day I walked down to Memorial Stadium, entered it by walking through the same holes in the chain-link fence that everyone else was using, and took myself on a slow walk around its perimeter.

Teams were playing soccer on the field, not one big match but several smaller ones, more informal, very energetic on the bright green newly-turfed field, it looked grand.

In re: the "walking track/path/trail" as Debra described it, I could easily see the design and placement challenge.

I imagine that our lively new Director of Parks and Recreation, D. Tyrell McGirt, is thinking about this.

I also walked around the path in Mountain View Park and then a ways up the hill toward the higher Beaucatcher Trail which I have walked often. As a member of the City's Greenway Committee at that time, I worked extensively on the project to make a Greenway out of it.

And then I walked back through the East End/Valley Street Neighborhood, along Martin Luther King, Jr. Drive, and past your dad's Nazareth Church.

As I walked along, it occurred to me that the neighborhood might make good use out of a neighborhood plan like the ones that were prepared for Shiloh and Burton Street.

Just a suggestion that you might think about that, among other things.

Best,

Dave
