Doug,

Thes slides have borders and page numbers on them which makes them difficult to import into the presentation.Â

Chief Zack,Â

Here's an initial start on the reviewÂ of gun violence data. I've focused on gun calls and violent gun crime to illustrate how we've had an above average year and that may be an indication of the winter to come.Â

A summer of elevated gun violence may be an indicator of winter to come

Violent Gun Crime

Shots Fired Calls

☛ Since 2018, we've averaged 529 shots fired calls a year.

○ Highest year: 2020 at 652

☛ This year, we've averaged 43 shots fired calls per month; a total of 367 for the year

☛ Typically, we've seen a seasonal decline in shots fired calls in August with an increase in September

○ This year, we've seen an above average number of shots fired calls in July and August

○ If the seasonal 10% increase in September continues, we could see as many as 55 shots fired calls this month; especially given ongoing gun violence disputes.

☛ Gun calls often drop in October only to rise again through November and December

Violent Gun Crime

Gun Crime

☛ Since 2018, we typically have 180 violent gun crimes per year (i.e. homicide, aggravated assault, rape and robbery)

○ Highest year: 2019 at 195

○ So far, there have been 138 this year

☛ On average, there are 15 violent gun crimes reported each month.

○ 5 of the last 8 months have seen above average gun violence. There was an average of 20 violent gun crimes per month from July to August.

☛ As with gun calls, there is a seasonal increase of violent gun crimes in the 4th quarter with a peak in November
